

The magic of a breeze

Blowing into my world on the breath of the Mother of Invention,
A bit of wind is a good thing,
That's my solidified contention,
Let the windy breeze sing,
And if you let your doubts be in a state of considered suspension,
And if sweet saxophone in your ear makes it ring,
Well, then, let's give the world just a bit of a new direction,
You see it's quite a natural thing,
For if we took a cool breeze to heart as I've previously had cause to mention,
There are a few things this just might bring,
And none of them are hard to take or full of pretension,
But as they uplift a bird on the wing,
For working magic from the wind is my best intention!

By: Daniel A. Stafford, 2001
© 2001

Brought to you by Intel, Oregon's largest purchaser of wind power.
www.intel.com/community/oregon